

PODCAST RECOMENDATIONS

Though not all of these podcasts are necessarily Christian or have a Christian world view, they are worth a listen! Sometimes fun, sometimes thought provoking and always a learning experience! Check one out.

For the whole family

Dream Big

Precocious 7-year-old Eva Karpman and her mom interview celebs, award winners and experts in a range of fields each week, with a hope of encouraging young people to find their passion and follow their dreams. The relatable mother-daughter dynamic and the big-name guests make this a fun choice for kids and their parents to listen to together.

Best for: Kids

Wow in the World

One of the newest podcasts to hit the scene, NPR's first show for kids is exactly the sort of engaging, well-produced content you would expect from the leaders in radio and audio series. Hosts Guy Roz and Mindy Thomas exude joy and curiosity while discussing the latest news in science and technology in a way that's enjoyable for kids and informative for grown-ups. Best for: Kids

Book Club for Kids

This excellent biweekly podcast features middle-schoolers talking about a popular middle-grade or YA book as well as sharing their favorite book recommendations. Public radio figure Kitty Felde runs the discussion, and each episode includes a passage of that week's book read by a celebrity guest. Best for: Tweens and teens

For adults of every age

The Bible Project

The goal of the BibleProject is to help people experience the Bible as a unified story that leads to Jesus. In this podcast, the creators of BibleProject have interesting and in-depth conversations about the Bible and theology. It is a companion podcast to BibleProject videos found at bibleproject.com.

These videos are worth a watch all on their own! Check it out.

Best for: 15 and up (content is a little heady for younger people)

Emotionally Healthy Leader

Pete Scazarro is the founding pastor of New Life Fellowship in Queens New York and co-creator of Emotionally Healthy Discipleship. In this podcast, Pete shares teachings and sermons that come from his 25 plus year journey toward emotional and spiritual health.

Best for: 16 and us

The New Activist

The podcast of International Justice Ministry. Each week you will hear interviews with world changers and activists tackling some of the world's biggest problems. Have your eyes opened and your heart challenged as you learn how others are loving and serving the people that God loves.

Best for: Teens and up
